Who We Are

As one of the smallest agencies within the U.S. Department of Transportation, the Pipeline and Hazardous Materials Safety Administration (PHMSA) has a huge mission protecting the public and the environment from risks involved with overseeing close to 1 million daily shipments of hazardous materials and over 2.6 million miles of pipelines across the United States that supply 64 percent of the nation's vital energy commodities.

Where We Are

What We Do

- Establish national policy
- Inspect and enforce regulations and standards
- Provide training to state and federal inspectors
- Conduct research
- Prepare the public and first responders to prevent incidents
- Reduce consequences if an incident occurs

Challenging Job . . . Promising Career

"The Office of Pipeline Safety gave me the opportunity to pursue a meaningful engineering career that makes a positive difference. I enjoy meeting new people, traveling state-to-state, and working with pipeline operators in the field to help meet PHMSA's safety mission"

Cynthia Ishikawa
General Engineer (Inspector), Western Region

With nearly 500 employees, PHMSA is committed to building a diverse and highly skilled workforce. We offer a broad range of careers in engineering, general business, legal, science, administrative and more. Here are some of our major occupations:

- ◆ Engineers
- ◆ Scientists
- ◆ Transportation Specialists
- ◆ Information Technology Specialists
- ◆ Program Managers
